Next Avenue CBus is Exploring New Roads—Find Out What’s Next for You

Next Avenue CBus is the local application of a PBS national initiative aimed at the 50+ generation—it’s the website, series of workshops, and community conversations where grown-ups keep growing.

With a dynamic digital presence at wosu.org/nextavenuecbus, this ‘microsite’ features articles and blog posts from local citizens focused on topics important to this generation: Living & Learning, Work & Purpose, and Well-Being. Next Avenue CBus has already had a successful launch event and workshop, and now through the participation of engaged volunteers and with support from Kensington Wealth Partners, has kicked off a new Learning Series.

On May 28, WOSU Public Media and Next Avenue CBus presented the first workshop in the Learning Series, “Recharge Your Career After 50”. The workshop, led by executive coach John Schuster, explored how to have meaningful and fulfilling work while balancing purpose and paycheck at any age.

John teaches coaching skills at Columbia University as well as the Hudson Institute of Coaching. He conducts programs on career renewal and planning for retirement in multiple corporate and non-profit environments. A board member of the Jung Association of Central Ohio, he is also the author of several books, including Answering Your Call: A Guide to Living Your Deepest Purpose, and The Power of Your Past: The Art of Recalling, Reclaiming and Recasting. John knows the significance of exploring next avenues at different times in life, having earned two Masters degrees, one in literature and one in psychology, 40 years apart.

There will be two more workshops in the Next Avenue CBus Learning Series, also led by Schuster, focused on inner well-being after retirement and positive aging, in the fall of 2015 and winter of 2016.

Interested in becoming a blogger, participating in the workshops, or just want to learn more about Next Avenue CBus? Please contact Virginia Macali at virginia.macali@wosu.org.

Chris Farrell, Senior Economics Contributor at Marketplace on 89.7 NPR News, is coming to Columbus

Chris Farrell, economics editor of Marketplace Money, the nationally syndicated one-hour weekly personal finance show produced by American Public Media, and economics correspondent for Marketplace heard on 89.7 NPR News, is coming to Columbus. A graduate of Stanford and the London School of Economics, he will be in town as part of the Next Avenue CBus initiative.

Chris will be hosting a talk and book signing on the evening of Wednesday, June 24, at the Fawcett Center on Ohio State’s campus where WOSU Public Media’s offices are located. The speaking engagement will focus on his latest publication Unretirement: How Baby Boomers Are Changing the Way We Think About Work, Community and the Good Life.

We have a two-man race for Columbus Mayor. City Council President Andrew Ginther will face Franklin County Sheriff Zach Scott in the November election (assuming a possible recount verifies Scott’s finish). The two men beat out two other candidates—Former Columbus Board of Education President Terry Boyd and community activist James Ragland in the May 5th non-partisan primary.

For Andrew Ginther, Mayor Michael Coleman’s handpicked successor, the primary results look impressive. He captured more than half the vote—52 percent to 18 percent for his closest competitors. His vote total was triple that of the other potential candidates. That should make Ginther the overwhelming favorite to win the mayor’s race in the fall.

Potential big-money donors and developers looking to do business with the mayor, like to bet on a winner. It will be hard for Zach Scott to energize donors or supporters with his poor primary showing.

But while Ginther was the big fish in the primary, it was a pretty small pond. Less than 10 percent of the city’s registered voters cast ballots, half the turnout for the last competitive mayoral primary in 1999. That means despite Ginther spending more than a million dollars on his pre-primary campaign, only 5 percent of the city’s voters cast a ballot for him. City elections, particularly primary elections have notoriously meager turnouts, but this year looks especially poor.

For a number of reasons, voters just don’t seem excited about the candidates or the issues facing the city. First, the Republican Party seems to have given up on City Hall. Its candidate Terry Boyd raised and spent very little on his campaign and the party did not invest in television ads backing Boyd’s bid.

Second, the issues did not fire up voters. Zach Scott tried to stir anger over tax deals for downtown developers and former school board member Ginther’s oversight during the data rigging scandal. Voters shrugged.

Third, Columbus voters really have played a minor role in picking their leaders in recent years. Democrats have controlled City Council seats by having incumbents resign early, appointing a successor who then runs with the huge advantage of incumbency. Is there any wonder voters don’t know the candidates?

There is another possible explanation for voter apathy: people take action when they’re mad; when happy, we tend to sit back and enjoy. Perhaps Columbus voters are happy, they like what they have, and don’t feel the need to change their leaders.

The American Sound

Saturdays at 6pm & Tuesdays at 7pm with Jennifer Hambrick

June has a fun and festive feel on The American Sound. During the first week of the month, we’ll commemorate D-Day with a Star-Spangled Symphony by Don Gillis. The following week, we’ll celebrate Father’s Day and, on the occasion of the Columbus Arts Festival, we’ll enjoy our own festival of central Ohio composers and performers. On June 13 and 16, don’t miss the first installment of The American Sound's Summer Film Music Festival with Elmer Bernstein's poignant music for To Kill a Mockingbird. And in the final week of the month, it’s bobbed hair and brilliant bangles with Harry Reser’s Flapperette.

Fretworks

Saturdays & Wednesdays at 7pm with John Rittmeyer

This month brings you a wide variety of music: Guitarist John Williams plays his Aeolian Suite and music by Greek composer Mikis Theodorakis; the Los Angeles Guitar Quartet has “Music from the Time of Cervantes” from their new recording; the Netherlands Guitar Trio has their arrangement of the Peer Gynt Suite No. 1 by Grieg; and Paul Galbraith plays a Haydn sonata on an 8-string guitar. Jason Vieaux also offers a suite by J. S. Bach, and there’s a little Hawaiian slack-key guitar from Moses Kahamoku.

Masterpiece Mystery: Zen
Saturdays at 9pm on WOSU TV (starts 6/20)
What does an honest cop do when his bosses are on the side of the lawbreakers? Outwitting prosecutors, politicians, mobsters, and run-of-the-mill kidnappers and killers, Detective Aurelio Zen brings justice to modern-day Italy, whether the authorities want it or not.

First Peoples
Wednesdays at 9pm on WOSU TV (starts 6/24)
See how the mixing of prehistoric human genes led the way for our species to survive and thrive around the globe. Archaeology, genetics and anthropology cast new light on 200,000 years of history, detailing how early humans became dominant.

Göring’s Secret - The Story of Hitler’s Marshall
Monday, June 29 at 10pm on WOSU TV
Illustrated by a newly unearthed collection of personal film reels, this revealing documentary provides an uncensored look at the private life of Hermann Göring, Hitler’s devoted follower and second-in-command.
The Lawrence Welk Show Encore
Saturdays at 8pm on WOSU Plus
One of the most successful and fondly-remembered shows in TV history comes to WOSU Plus. The Lawrence Welk Show featured musical numbers and skits, with host Welk. As the longest-running televised American musical variety show, it still remains a family favorite.

Great Performances at the Met
Sundays at 8pm on WOSU Plus
Bringing the best in the performing arts, Great Performances ensures its audiences “the best seats in the house” with a roster of artists and performing arts companies that represent a “Who’s Who” of excellence and virtuosity in the international performing arts.

Cookin’ Kids Afternoon
Sunday, June 28 from noon–6pm on WOSU Plus
The Hey Kids. Let’s Cook crew is in the kitchen whipping up dishes. These tasty and easy meals are perfect for the budding young chef. Adding to the young chefs’ cookbook are Katie Brown, Christina Pirello, and Andreas Viestad with their version of kid-friendly fare.
