Our 2016 Community Report is now available and the piece truly shows the breadth of your dynamic local public media organization.

Our success last year in reaching a greater audience for all our media channels was especially remarkable at a time when you have so many media choices literally at your fingertips. For example, our average annual listener growth over the past six years for 89.7 NPR News and Classical 101 is 18 percent and 12 percent, respectively. And how about this one: the average percentage growth of video views on our wosu.org website is over 140 percent. That’s for every year since 2010!

A major challenge in 2016 was the departure of our TV studios and production center from the COSI Science Center. We hosted debates, forums, performances, and more at WOSU@COSI—a remarkable space that brought the community together. While WOSU has moved all its television studios into the OSU Fawcett Center, an exciting opportunity is on the horizon.

WOSU Public Media plans, with individual and corporate support, to move its headquarters to a new building as part of the 15th & High University District. This vision may take some time, but we’re thrilled with the potential it offers to expand our programming and service reach and grow our ability to “engage, inform and inspire” all the citizens of central Ohio. Look for more to come on the WOSU 15th & High project.

We hope you enjoy surveying some of what we do to make this a better community to live and work. Thank you for your support!

– Tom Rieland, General Manager

89.7 NPR News Tracks Change in Thoughtful, Factual Manner

The change in power in Washington has produced an avalanche of policy changes, controversies and protests. Journalists are struggling to cover it all. News consumers are struggling to make sense of it all. The divisive rhetoric, daily demonstrations, and “alternative facts” can cause even the most committed news junkie to tune out.

Please don’t.

That’s not just because WOSU wants listeners and viewers. Our country needs an informed public, perhaps now more than ever. 89.7 NPR News and our partners vow to follow closely the changes in Washington and report them in a fair and balanced manner. You can rely on us; our only agenda is to document, question and enlighten. NPR has been covering Washington for decades, and WOSU is one of the most recognized news organizations in Ohio. We’ll explain how policy shifts will affect you and your community.

89.7 and NPR are stepping up our game. Programs like All Sides with Ann Fisher (10am weekdays) and On Point (1pm weekdays) are calmly and thoughtfully discussing the transition. A special call-in program, Indivisible (Mon - Thurs, 8pm) cultivates a national conversation about America in a time of change. NPR and wosu.org are fact-checking and annotating major speeches – putting statements in context and calling out falsehoods.

You may not agree with the president or his critics, but please do not tune them out; listen to all sides, especially the sides with whom you disagree. Whether you decide to protest or just have an informed civil discussion over dinner, 89.7 NPR News gives you the facts and analysis you need and can trust.

Exploring Music with Bill McGlaughlin

If you’re a longtime public radio listener, you might recognize the name Bill McGlaughlin as the host of St. Paul Sunday, which premiered in 1980 and ran for nearly 30 years. Back in 2002, WFMT approached McGlaughlin about hosting a new program to fill the void left by the retirement of Karl Haas and his popular program Adventures in Good Music. The rest, as they say, is history. Since 2003, McGlaughlin has been hosting 5 shows every week, each week’s show spun around a particular theme.

McGlaughlin’s introduction to music came late; he was fourteen before he took his first piano lessons. “Happily, I understood immediately what a wonderful thing I’d stumbled into. I can remember thinking as I walked away from my second piano lesson — ‘Well, that’s it. I’ll be a musician.’ Of course, I had no idea what that decision meant, exactly.”

Over the years, McGlaughlin was to discover that “being a musician” could embrace a great many paths. He has served as an educator, a performer, a composer, and a conductor.

Most people know him best, however, as a genial and knowledgeable host and interviewer…one who asks the questions listeners themselves might ask. And one who shares each day his unmistakable passion for the music he has committed his life to. Beginning March 6, listeners to WOSU's Classical 101 can hear Exploring Music every weeknight at 6pm.

March also brings us encore broadcasts of last year’s popular series Musica Cubana with hosts Orlay Alonso and Christopher Purdy. Hear it Sundays at 1pm.
