A Look at Women in Ohio Politics

Inspired by the 2017 Women’s March on Washington, the #MeToo movement and other forces, 2018 is shaping up to be a record year for women running for elected office. Rutgers University’s Center for American Women and Politics counts 309 women running for seats in the US House, 29 women running for US Senate and 40 women running in governors’ races.

Among Ohio elected officials, the gender gap remains wide. Even though women make up the majority of the population, they remain in the minority in public office. The Ohio legislature has never been more than 25% female and currently stands at 22%. Only a quarter of county commissioners are women. And the current governor’s race which began with four female candidates, dwindled down to one.

While women around the country look to make history, can women in the Buckeye State break barriers this year?

The May 24th edition of Dialogue, presented by WOSU and OSU’s John Glenn College of Public Affairs, will examine Ohio’s political gender gap. Hosted by NPR political correspondent Asma Khalid, the event will explore the challenges and opportunities for female candidates. She’ll be joined by state senator Charleta Tavares (D- Columbus), Columbus Recreation and Parks’ Sophia Fifner and OSU political science professor Wendy Smooth.

We encourage you to join the Dialogue

Thursday, May 24 at 6pm at OSU’s Fawcett Center.

The Daily – Your Deep Dive Into The Day’s Top Story

89.7 NPR News now delivers the radio edition of the popular podcast The Daily to listeners. The New York Times and American Public Media collaborated earlier this year to extend the audio news report’s following of 4.5 million monthly unique listeners to the radio audience. The radio edition of the popular podcast airs weeknights at 6:30pm, hosted by celebrated journalist Michael Barbaro.

The Daily draws on the unrivaled quality and expertise of The New York Times’ global footprint of more than 1,450 journalists. The Daily podcast has found massive success, becoming the most-downloaded new show in 2017 on Apple Podcasts and winning the DuPont-Columbia University Award for audio excellence. The radio edition gives public radio listeners a deep analysis of one or two of the day’s top news stories.

Barbaro’s resume includes a tenure as national political correspondent at The New York Times, and he also has served as host of The Run-up, a political podcast that chronicled the 2016 election. Prior to that, he covered New York’s City Hall and the US retail industry. A Yale graduate, Barbaro joined The New York Times after reporting for The Washington Post and covering the biotechnology industry.

May Highlights

May brings the exciting launch of Classical 101’s new show Front Row Center with Christopher Purdy. Friday nights at 7pm, take a seat next to our resident opera aficionado and noted raconteur Christopher Purdy for a celebration of the voice. Each week Christopher will draw together a program of exciting vocal favorites and unexpected discoveries, featuring both legendary singers of the past and today’s singers of note. You’ll hear opera excerpts, treasures from the song repertoire, and highlights from recent releases...all with Christopher’s distinctive wit and passion. Be listening Friday nights from 7pm-9pm for Front Row Center... and let us know what you think.

After the Met broadcast season wraps up on May 5, your Saturday afternoons will feature the compelling mix of classical music you rely on throughout the week, and you can still get your weekly opera fix year-round on Friday nights at 7pm with Front Row Center.

The American Sound

This month on The American Sound catch John Knowles Paine’s dramatic First Symphony, an evocative symphonic movement by Meredith Wilson inspired by Mission San Juan Capistrano and a piano work by Michael Torke as sparkling as the Pacific Ocean view that inspired it. Also, an 80th birthday celebration for legendary American composer William Bolcom. Saturdays at 6pm and Tuesdays at 7pm.

Sunday Baroque

Sunday Baroque celebrates the holidays...the May holidays...Cinco de Mayo, Mother’s Day, Victoria Day (Canada) and Memorial Day. Hear baroque music from “New Spain,” a tribute to musical mothers, a salute to the top Canadian early music ensembles, and a tribute to fallen heroes with a haunting ancient Requiem Mass. Sunday mornings from 6am-10am.
