WOSU Acts to Narrow the Local Skills Gap

The ten counties of metropolitan Columbus now have a population exceeding two million people and growing. Though the regional jobless rate hovers around four percent, there are still tens of thousands of young adults searching for jobs and many others underemployed in jobs without a future. At the same time, there’s a great demand for skilled employees in fields such as healthcare and insurance in Columbus. A 2015 study showed that over 145,000 central Ohioans don’t have a high school diploma and lack the skills to get a job in these growing sectors. This mismatch between the well-paid available jobs and the number of qualified workers to fill them is a serious issue in the Columbus region.

Helping these workers overcome barriers and connect to the skills needed to land jobs is part of a new WOSU Public Media initiative called American Graduate – Getting to Work. A grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting will help WOSU create podcasts, video segments, public forums, and social media initiatives focused on communicating the essential skills needed for students and workers to succeed in the local job market.

WOSU will be working with numerous local partners including affiliates of the Central Ohio Compact coalition. It will also be partnering with the public stations in Cleveland and Cincinnati to share resources and create programming to address these issues across Ohio.

We’re very excited to share more about this impactful work, being led by director Marcelita Haskins and producer Leticia Wiggins. Our mission at WOSU Public Media is to engage, inform, and inspire. All three will be needed for this collaborative work to move the needle on skills training and job fulfillment in the coming years.

WOSU Public Media
A Transformative Gift

Local philanthropic couple Sandy and Andy Ross have made a $5 million commitment to WOSU Public Media. This transformative gift, the largest in WOSU’s history, lays the groundwork for WOSU’s plans for new headquarters in the 15th & High University District on the campus of The Ohio State University.

The Rosses have long supported WOSU, being stalwart members for over 30 years and making significant contributions to advance initiatives focused on education, classical music, news and civil discourse. Through leadership giving, they have previously helped WOSU develop a media lab for teens to create original programming, provided capital resources when Classical 101 changed FM frequency, and have consistently challenged others in the community to give by matching WOSU member gifts.

“Sandy and I have enjoyed everything WOSU has to offer for so long, and we want to help continue to support that quality programming well into the future,” said Andy Ross. “Whether I’m tinkering with engines and listening to 89.7 NPR News, or Sandy’s in the garden enjoying Classical 101, or we’re both watching PBS NewsHour in the evening, we can’t imagine our lives without WOSU, and want to inspire others to have it in their lives.”

When presented with the opportunity to assist in laying the foundation for WOSU to have a larger presence in central Ohio, Andy and Sandy knew this was their time to make a focused impact with their philanthropy.

“Bringing WOSU to central campus will help spark media content innovations across Ohio State and throughout the broader Columbus community,” said Ohio State President Michael V. Drake. “I am grateful to Andy and Sandy for their incredible generosity. Their gift ensures WOSU’s success for decades to come.”

With a history of quality programming and trusted relationship with WOSU, the Rosses were comfortable and confident that their giving would be the critical anchor in our exciting journey ahead.

“This generous and visionary gift provides for the future of WOSU. We have a bold plan to expand our local broadcast, public engagement, and digital media capabilities to build our community in innovative ways. Andy and Sandy are making that plan possible,” said Tom Rieland, General Manager of WOSU Public Media.

Thank you, Andy and Sandy, for your tremendous generosity!

89.7 NPR News Prepares Voters for Decisive Midterm Elections with Two Special Run Series

This promises to be one of the most noteworthy midterm elections in the nation’s history. America finds itself its most divided in 50 years. It seems everyone has taken a side on issues ranging from the future of the Supreme Court, the economy, immigration, to healthcare, and foreign policy. 89.7 NPR News and its partners are teaming up to take the pulse of the voter and provide you with the information and context you need to cast an informed vote.

America On The Line – Weeknights, 8pm

America On The Line, hosted by award-winning journalist Jonathan Capehart, convenes a gathering of everyday Americans to examine the why and how of political currents against the impending midterms. Jonathan will be joined by a rotating cast of regular contributors from all sides of the political spectrum and take calls from listeners from around the country. Wherever you stand on the political, social and policy issues of our time, America On The Line will be essential listening. The show, produced by WNYC in New York, airs live Monday – Thursday at 8pm through November 8.

The Politics Show from NPR – Sundays, 10am

The Politics Show from NPR is the definitive guide to the 2018 midterms – a one-hour roundtable discussion that presents a deep dive on the major races, themes, and issues defining these historic elections.

Featuring the trademark wit that has long characterized the popular NPR Politics Podcast, The Politics Show from NPR features reporters who cover politics from a number of different perspectives – from NPR’s White House and Congressional teams to Member station reporters covering local races. Their unique insights into the elections enable listeners to come away able to discuss the major choices facing voters this election.

The Politics Show from NPR airs Sunday mornings at 10am through November 11.
Musical Riches of Cuba

This fall, Classical 101 is bringing the spice – and we’re not talking pumpkin spice, we’re talking Cuban spice! This month Columbus’ own Orlay Alonso returns to the air for a third season of Musica Cubana, with four new episodes of colorful music. The charismatic pianist takes host Christopher Purdy on a tour through the musical riches of Cuba – you should come, too!

Pianist Orlay Alonso trained in Havana before leaving Cuba with his parents in 1996. He settled in New York, later earning degrees from both the Mannes School of Music and Yale University. He earned his doctorate at OSU in 2015. He currently teaches at Capital University and performs widely around the Columbus area, including recent appearances with the Columbus Symphony Orchestra.

In early 2019, Orlay and his brother Orlando, also a very fine pianist, will be returning to the land of their birth for a series of duo piano recitals. This November, the two brothers will be performing a concert of Cuban music at the Southern Theatre, followed by a Cuban themed dance in downtown Columbus.

Experience the excitement and passion of Cuban music with the perfect host! Hear Musica Cubana Sundays at 1pm.

October is a good month for baritones on Front Row Center! October 12 features Thomas Quasthoff with Mahler’s Songs of a Wayfarer, Nathan Gunn sings American songs on October 17, and Hermann Prey sings Schumann’s Liederkreis on October 26. And of course, there will be lots of opera. Friday nights at 7pm.

Sunday Baroque

Back in 1977, NASA launched the Voyager space probe to study Jupiter and Saturn. On board was a 12-inch disc containing a variety of sounds from Earth, including music. On October 14th, Sunday Baroque will feature some of the baroque music included on that historic, celestial soundtrack to celebrate Astronomy Day, coming up on October 20th. Sunday mornings from 6-10am.

The American Sound

During October, The American Sound celebrates musical contributions to the Harlem Renaissance. Travel back a century to the streets of New York with James P. Johnson’s Harlem Symphony, and experience Johnson’s Yamekraw – his famed response to Gershwin’s Rhapsody in Blue. Take in moving performances of Harry T. Burleigh’s legendary arrangements of spirituals, selections from Harry Lawrence Freeman’s opera Voodoo, and other composers – some with Ohio connections. Listen to Classical 101 and visit wosu.org/classical101 for engaging special features about classical music of the Harlem Renaissance. Saturdays at 6pm and Tuesdays at 7pm.

Exploring Music With Bill McGlaughlin

The week of October 20, it’s the Magnificent Magyars! Hungary was settled by the Magyars in the late 9th century and in 1000 became a state. Hungary adopted Latin Christianity in the 11th century, and the country’s rich musical heritage of church music started: Gregorian plainchants, and later in the Middle Ages with fully realized polyphonic singing. Bill picks it up from there with the blending of religious music and ethnic folksongs from the countryside, reflected in the music of Liszt, Kodály, and Bartók. And let’s not forget the influences of Hungarian gypsy music and Transylvanian dances. Weeknights at 6pm.
