
Coming in 2020

We hope you spend some time reviewing Airfare’s cover image of the new headquarters of WOSU Public Media. After years of planning, we are close to the groundbreaking for a new five-floor facility located at 14th Avenue and Pearl Alley across from The Ohio State University campus.

Nearly fifty years have passed since WOSU radio and television took root in the basement of the Fawcett Center. The space conditions have been increasingly challenging and have limited our ability to serve the citizens of central Ohio. The new facility will be transformative.

The public media organization of the future must be more accessible, inspiring innovation, collaboration, and community connections. More than just a structure, this space will provide special opportunities to engage our community members in experiential activities and events, as well as expand local radio, television, and digital programming.

Highlights of our New Place. New Space. New Experience. include:

• Andy and Sandy Ross Community Studio: Located on the first floor near the main entrance will be a 2,200 square foot community studio for public experiences including forums with civil discussions, special broadcasts of WOSU programming, screenings of local and PBS programming, teacher learning workshops, and intimate musical performances. This flexible and transparent space will open to the American Electric Power Foundation Community Terrace and grow WOSU’s public engagement presence with two hundred events and activities planned for the first year.

• Media Learning Lab: The third floor will showcase our media learning lab, designed to delve into the storytelling of the future and train the next generation. From podcasts to smart phone documentaries to virtual reality, this makerspace will have the latest technology and be open to students and the public for creation of media.

This building will reflect our heritage as one of the earliest educational broadcasters in America and we project completion as we celebrate our 100th year of public service to Ohio in 2020. Whatever your connection to WOSU, it will be remarkably enhanced by the new experiences you will have at 14th & Pearl.

We hope you are intrigued and want to learn more.

Many young people are struggling to avoid college debt and find good-paying jobs. Companies say they can’t find people to fill the many good-paying openings they have. What gives? The answer: the skills gap – the cavity between graduating students’ training and modern job requirements.

WOSU Public Media’s upcoming podcast series, Rivet, will look at the reasons for the gap and tell stories of workers and companies looking to close it.

Producer and host Leticia Wiggins will share the journeys of young people starting their careers – their triumphs and tribulations as they take lesser-known pathways to landing fulfilling jobs.

Rivet is part of a national public media project, American Graduate: Getting to Work. WOSU, thanks to a grant from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, is working with local schools, businesses and community organizations to identify workforce challenges and opportunities. Rivet is one component of WOSU’s multimedia effort that will use TV, radio and digital channels to help students and workers identify the skills they need to succeed in the job markets of today and tomorrow.

Rivet targets people ages 16 to 26 – not the typical public broadcasting audience. To reach them, we are meeting them where they are – in their smartphone’s podcast queue.

So even if you are not 16 to 26, subscribe to Rivet and hear what central Ohio’s workforce of the future sounds like. Find Rivet wherever you get your podcasts.

Midterm Election

In the first quarter of the 21st century, the campaign never ends. We just take a break occasionally to let voters chime in. Voters’ next chance to have their say is November 6th when they will choose a new governor and decide races for US Senate, Congress and Ohio legislative districts.

WOSU TV, 89.7 NPR News and wosu.org and its partners NPR and PBS will provide comprehensive coverage of all the major races affecting central Ohio – from which party controls Congress, to the fate of local school levies.

Then days after Election Day, WOSU Public Media and OSU’s Glenn College of Public Affairs will discuss what it all means at our next Dialogue event, November 13th at 6pm. WOSU News Content Director Mike Thompson will lead a discussion with political experts and members of an engaged audience.

On Point Helps 89.7 NPR News Lunchtime Listeners Digest the News

In this constantly changing news environment, where major events happen nearly every hour, it can be hard to keep up and even harder to make sense of it all. To help bridge the gap between the drive to work and the drive home, 89.7 NPR News now airs On Point from noon-2pm. On Point, with new host Meghna Chakrabarti, provides nuanced explorations of complex topics in real time. It matches urgency and timeliness with depth.
Thanksgiving Day

Families and friends from many traditions will be celebrating this most American of holidays by sharing a meal together. And their traditions will be present on the table as they share companionship and gratitude, along with food.

Join host Jennifer Hambrick for Thanksgiving with The American Sound. During the program’s first hour, “Let Us Break Bread Together,” we pay musical tribute to the time-honored tradition of breaking bread with others. A few of our listeners share stories about how family bread recipes from around the world make their family gatherings special. And there’s lots of music to evoke the golden hues of the season, from Autumn by Dan Locklair, Eric Whitacre’s Lux aurumque and Jeremiah Ingalls’ Harvest Hymn, all the way to the Spiritual Let Us Break Bread Together. The program’s second hour, “Pilgrim’s Rest,” includes Stephen Paulus’ sublime Pilgrims’ Hymn and Thomas Canning’s hauntingly beautiful Fantasy on a Hymn Tune, George Walker’s Lyric for Strings – and more. Thanksgiving with the American Sound, Thanksgiving Day at 2pm on Classical 101.

November 11
This week the Lancaster Chorale joins ProMusica for Mozart’s powerful final masterpiece, his Requiem.

November 18
Cellist Natalie Klein joins ProMusica this week for two amazing works...Within Her Arms, a powerful elegy by Anna Clyne, and the Shostakovich Cello Concerto No. 1.

November 25
Creative Partner and Principal Guest Artist Vadim Gluzman leads ProMusica in several favorites...Bach’s Brandenburg Concerto No. 5, with harpsichordist David Schrader, the Adagio from Bach’s Violin Sonata No. 1 in G, and the Petite Suite by Carl Nielsen. Gluzman’s amazing artistry is showcased in Distant Light by Pēteris Vasks, and in the hauntingly beautiful work for solo violin, T’filah by Lera Auerbach.

Musica Sacra
Host Christopher Purdy is a huge opera buff, so if you ask him who his favorite composer is, you’ll likely be surprised to hear him say Monteverdi! Tune in to Musica Sacra on November 25 to hear Monteverdi’s profound Vespers of the Blessed Virgin with the Stuttgart Chamber Choir and Musica Fiata Cologne. Another highlight in November, Vivaldi’s Gloria with Robert Shaw and the Atlanta Symphony Orchestra and Chorus. Sunday nights at 8pm.

Exploring Music With Bill McLaughlin
Week of November 5
Walt Whitman taught Americans how to hear their country sing in his 1860 poem. Composer Aaron Copland took up Whitman’s call and fashioned his Lincoln Portrait as part of an expressive musical landscape of the country in the early 20th century. Bill reveals the extraordinary American-ness captured in this music – and in election speeches incorporated into operas such as Douglas Moore’s Ballad of Baby Doe – then through the music of Ives, Barber, Ellington, Gershwin, and Mark O’Connor. Weeknights at 6pm.

ProMusica Chamber Orchestra
Join host Boyce Lancaster to kick off the broadcast season of ProMusica Chamber Orchestra. You can enjoy performances by one of Columbus’ finest ensembles Sunday afternoons at 1pm through December.

November 4
Pianist/composer Conrad Tao will return to Columbus for his third visit, performing the world premiere of his new composition Over. The first program of ProMusica’s broadcast season features Beethoven’s Fifth Symphony, marking the beginning of the orchestra’s two-year Beethoven Symphony Cycle.
