Planning Is Under Way for Ohio News Collaborative

Three public media stations in Ohio – WOSU Public Media, ideastream in Cleveland and Cincinnati Public Radio – are starting the planning process to implement a statewide public radio and digital news collaborative. Its output made available to all stations could include a website, a radio program, daily newscasts and a daily newsletter. Combined, the three anchor stations have approximately 50 news staffers. Ultimately, the goal is for all of Ohio’s 13 NPR-affiliate stations to be involved, coming together to coordinate editorial resources and an efficient network of local journalists.

As local news organizations across Ohio suffer from layoffs and closures, the statewide news collaborative addresses a significant need. “One of the glaring holes in statewide coverage is rural Ohio,” stated WOSU Public Media general manager Tom Rieland. “We believe this initiative will allow for quality reporting about the special challenges faced by many small towns and the people who live there. There are so many important stories that go unreported across Ohio, because journalism has all but disappeared in many small and even mid-sized communities.”

Set to begin in early 2020 ahead of the presidential election, the collaborative will be Ohio’s only daily statewide radio and digital news service and will allow for enhanced news coverage and widespread community engagement.

Debate: Is Parenting Overrated?
Tuesday, December 31 | 10am

What shapes us more: our DNA or the way we're raised? The nature-versus-nurture debate has drawn disagreement for thousands of years, and emerging genetic research indicates that the scale may be tipping away from parenting and toward biology; but not all trust the research. Is parenting, and all the time and resources that go into it, overrated? This special will try to settle the debate, or at least make you think differently.

Debate: Should ‘Medicare for All’ Replace Private Insurance?
Wednesday, January 1 | 10am

As the 2020 election approaches, Democrats promise bold changes to the American health care system. One idea championed by many on the progressive left is “Medicare for All,” or a single-payer system, which would do away with private health insurance for most forms of care. Advocates of this plan promise nationalizing health insurance will cut costs by reducing overhead and promote overall health by giving all Americans access to preventive care.

Their opponents argue “Medicare for All” would force Americans off employer-based plans, reduce incentives for doctors and providers, increase bureaucracy and inefficiencies in the system, and lead to worse care overall – all the while inflating the already swelled federal deficit. Should private health insurance exist? Or is it time for “Medicare for All”?

Embedded: Gaining and Holding Power; a Profile of Mitch McConnell
Wednesday, January 1 | 11am

This hour-long special profiles one of the most powerful people in the country: Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell. This hour-long special takes listeners on a journey, tracing McConnell’s career: from some of his earliest election races, to the huge influence he’s had in blocking campaign finance reform, to blocking a Supreme Court nominee, to his relationship with a most unlikely ally, President Donald Trump.
Classical 101 Holiday Programming

When Christmas and Chanukah overlap, as they do this year, it creates a rich week of musical traditions! From December 22 - 27, Classical 101 offers a colorful tapestry of music from both holidays. You can hear a seasonal special each night that week at 7pm. (Our regular weeknight programs, like Essential Classics and Symphony Showcase, will move to 8pm for that week.)

Traditional Favorites
The week kicks off with a Chanukah favorite, Candles Burning Brightly. Hear A Chanukah Celebration with Chicago acapella on Thursday, Dec. 26 at 7pm. Christmas favorites return to Classical 101 this year, including A Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols from King's College, Cambridge (Dec. 24 at 10am), the St. Olaf Christmas Festival (Dec. 25 at 8am) and New Year's Day from Vienna (Jan. 1 at 11am). See the complete schedule of holiday specials: wosu.org/holiday.

The American Sound
Enjoy a world premiere recording from the great African American composer Margaret Bonds. The Ballad of the Brown King is set to a text by Harlem Renaissance poet Langston Hughes, a lifelong friend of the composer. Join host Jennifer Hambrick for Christmas with The American Sound: Ballad of the Brown King, Saturday, Dec. 21 at 6pm and Christmas Eve at 7pm on Classical 101.

Music in Mid-Ohio
We'll hear from the Ohio State University Flute Troupe, the Lancaster Chorale and Columbus Gay Men's Chorus as a special treat. Join us for A Music in Mid-Ohio Christmas, hosted by Christopher Purdy, on Sunday, Dec. 22 at 3pm and repeated on Christmas Day at 8pm.

Christmas Eve
This year, your Christmas box is full of… Bachs! On Christmas Eve, enjoy an hour of music from four generations of the Bach family: Johann Sebastian Bach’s great uncle Johann Bach and uncle Georg Christoph Bach, JS Bach himself, and his sons CPE, JCF, and Johann Christian Bach. From uplifting cantatas and motets to chamber works – make your holiday sparkle. Join host Jennifer Hambrick for Christmas Bachs, Christmas Eve at 9am.

Christmas Day
Christmas on High brings you seasonal favorites and new carols from the Kansas City Chorale, the Dale Warland Singers, St. John’s College Choir, Cambridge and the Roger Wagner Chorale, with beautiful instrumental music by Bach mixed in. Join host Kent Teeters Christmas Day at 7pm.
