Reporting Bad News: Inform, Don’t Panic

It’s been a scary start to spring. Coronavirus spread quickly from China through Asia, to Europe and to the United States. Wall Street has experienced losses we have not seen in a generation. We at 89.7 NPR News face the daily dilemma of deciding how to cover these stories. Where’s the line between informing and inducing panic?

We and our colleagues at NPR and the BBC pride ourselves on our ability to present the facts unfiltered with limited speculation. That strategy is never more important than during stressful times.

Here’s how we do it. We stick to the facts.

We avoid words like “crisis” or “turmoil” until the facts clearly indicate it’s a crisis or turmoil, then we use the terms sparingly. We avoid hype and keep developments in perspective. Yes, coronavirus (COVID-19) is very contagious. It’s dangerous, but usually among vulnerable people. Most people recover. We note that often, if not in every story. We include advice from health experts – wash your hands and avoid touching your face.

Financial advisors say the Dow will come back, as the economy was strong before the outbreak. Still, for those near retirement, sharp declines are worrisome. They need information and expert opinions they can trust.

Even if we avoid hype and include perspective, the number and frequency of stories on viruses and Wall Street volatility can add to our audience’s stress. We mix in other stories – important stories about education and government, as well as uplifting profiles of extraordinary people.

Some ask, ‘Why do you keep covering this story?’ or ‘Why do you keep warning the elderly they are more vulnerable to coronavirus? It’s upsetting.” The answer is: We must. Information helps keep us safe. Information helps us make decisions about our financial futures. Our job as journalists is to present that information so it doesn’t keep you up at night.

Novel Coronavirus (COVID-19)

In a world where there are numerous outlets for information, public media continues to be America’s most trusted institution for news and educational programming. WOSU Public Media is a non-profit, community-supported, non-commercial multimedia organization serving Columbus and Central Ohio.

Turn to WOSU for the latest coverage of the outbreak:

- Comprehensive coverage on 89.7 NPR News, including live coverage of important announcements, news conferences, etc.
- WOSU mobile app alerts, coronavirus coverage and streaming of 89.7 NPR News (download at the Apple Store or Google Play)
- Updates and programs on All Sides with Ann Fisher
- Dedicated web site at wosu.org/coronavirus which aggregates WOSU and NPR coverage, a liveblog, resources and important links – including real-time updates and live coverage of news conferences
- A guide for healthy habits and how to talk to kids about coronavirus, in conjunction with WOSU Classroom and PBS KIDS
- Public messaging on WOSU TV
- WOSU Kids features 24/7 programming from PBS KIDS and remains a safe space for kids

While there are no confirmed cases in Columbus as of this printing, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention is predicting an eventual worldwide reach. One of the best ways to prevent the spread of viral illness is to minimize the circumstances in which individuals may interact and transmit disease. Due to the coronavirus outbreak, events are being rescheduled, seasons are being cancelled, schools and universities are suspending face-to-face instruction.

As you continue your daily routines, follow everyday preventative actions to help prevent the spread of COVID-19. The Ohio Department of Health makes the following recommendations to protect yourself from illness:

- Wash hands often with soap and water for at least 20 seconds; dry hands with a clean towel or air-dry hands.
- Use alcohol-based hand sanitizer when soap and water are unavailable.
- Cover your mouth with a tissue or sleeve when sneezing or coughing. Avoid touching your eyes, nose, or mouth with unwashed hands.
- Stay home when you are sick.
- Avoid contact with people who are sick.

Great Performances at the Met: Akhnaten

8pm • Sunday, April 5

Philip Glass’s Akhnaten is based on the idea of monotheism, dealing largely with the unseen forces affecting the inner, interpersonal, and universal, uniquely portrayed by the composer’s entrancing musical lines.

Line of Separation

Fridays at 9:30pm beginning April 17

Inspired by the actual village of Modlareuth, Line of Separation depicts the devastating effects of conflict on close-knit German communities after World War II.

Inside the Vatican

9pm • Wednesday, April 29

Filmed over a historic year, Inside The Vatican has unprecedented access to the inner workings of one of the most important places in the Christian world.

WOSU Radio — On the Grow

There's a new member of the WOSU radio family! On March 2, WOSX at 91.1 FM premiered on the WOSU Radio Network. WOSX covers all of Granville and portions of Newark and Heath. WOSU negotiated with Denison University to acquire the station after Denison decided to stream its student programming over the Internet rather than using radio. WOSU will provide student internships and other considerations to Denison as part of the agreement.

WOSX is the fifth regional radio station licensed to WOSU, joining stations in Marion, Mansfield, Coshocton and Portsmouth. WOSU’s primary stations are 89.7 NPR News and Classical 101 at 101.1 FM in Columbus.

All of WOSU’s regional FM stations are now carrying a mix of classical music and NPR and Central Ohio news programming to serve the many Ohioans losing quality, trusted sources of regional, national and international news. The demise of print journalism in particular has left many people with limited access to important news coverage, which is why WOSU decided to bring more news programming to its regional FM stations.

WOSU has also joined with NPR stations in Cleveland and Cincinnati in an effort to build a stronger digital and radio news backbone to serve all Ohioans. Stay tuned for more!

Thank you for supporting our efforts to keep Ohio informed.

Spring Musical Traditions

In addition to the arrival of more spring-like weather, April brings important holidays in many of the world’s major religions, often with musical traditions to mark those holidays. This month on Classical 101, you’ll have a chance to explore some of the music associated with Holy Week, Passover and Ramadan. Here are just a few highlights:

Musica Sacra

Musica Sacra takes the month of April to explore these sacred sounds through history with music by Tavener, Morten Lauridsen, Bach and Jennifer Higdon, among others. Take time during this season of rebirth and rejuvenation to contemplate and find space for peace each Sunday night from 8-10pm with host Kylie Harwell.

Between April 5 and 12 you’ll hear music for both Easter week and Passover. Among the seasonal selections, you’ll have a chance to hear Eric Korngold’s Passover Psalm on April 9 during the 1pm hour. And on Easter Sunday during the noon hour Jennifer Hambrick will feature selections from Bach’s Easter Oratorio.

There’s also a very special program featuring Rachmaninoff’s spiritual and haunting setting of texts from the Russian Orthodox All-Night Vigil ceremony. Host Valerie Kahler presents this a cappella masterpiece, performed in Russian by the Moscow State Chorus. Hear it Saturday, April 11 at 10pm and again on Sunday April 19 at 7pm, when the Eastern Orthodox Church celebrates Easter. These are just a few highlights in a music-filled month, so please be listening!

Program Highlights

Columbus Symphony

Columbus Symphony broadcasts continue this month with performances recorded back in March and April of 2019. On April 5, conductor Rossen Milanov leads the orchestra in Bruckner’s Symphony No. 7 and Joshua Roman’s Cello Concerto. Soloist Yoo Jin Jang plays Beethoven’s Violin Concerto in D on a program with Beethoven’s beloved Symphony No. 7 on April 12. It’s Stravinsky’s Rite of Spring on April 19 and Beethoven’s moving Symphony No. 9, “Choral” on April 26. Hear CSO concerts each Sunday in April, starting at 1pm with host Christopher Purdy.

Exploring Music

Exploring Music with Bill McGlaughlin has some special treats in store this month, including a weeklong exploration of Wagner’s monumental Ring Cycle, the week of April 6. For the week of April 13, McGlaughlin digs into the string quartet repertoire by Mendelssohn, Schumann and Brahms. Hear Exploring Music every weeknight at 6pm on Classical 101.
