The New Normal

I hope all of you are well. Allow me to spend just a moment to thank the WOSU team for their creativity and initiative to serve you during this crisis.

The staff continues to collaborate and ingeniously create important content, whether it’s a breaking news story, an introspective interview, a digital video series or curricular materials for teachers and parents. Others are working to keep WOSU afloat, providing tech assistance for the staff working from home, assuring the right programming is aired at the right time, communicating internally and with the public, serving our members and partners and keeping us on the air.

Though we’re asking constantly if everyone is well, we’re also deeply aware of our distinctive mission. The way we’ve responded is a check on who we are as an organization. It’s reflected in the trust we’ve built with one another, the respect for the creative process where the best ideas flow from anywhere and anyone, and the effectiveness of WOSU’s many leaders who have taken action without asking because they simply know it’s the right thing to do.

I invite you to participate in one of our initiatives, WOSU’s Letters from Home project. Read what your neighbors are telling us about their lives during this uncommon time. We want your reflective stories and thoughts, so consider submitting yourself. I believe you will be touched and inspired.

The following pages of this special Airfare edition provide an overview of some of our activities over these past six weeks. To the many of you who have reached out to thank our WOSU team for their service during this extraordinary period, your comments are greatly appreciated.

Stay Well. Be Kind.

WOSU Classroom Provides Resources for In-Home Learning

Resources to Support Parents and Teachers
As thousands of children across the state transition to at-home learning due to statewide school closures, WOSU Public Media is helping provide access to the very best in educational programming and resources for families and educators.

WOSU TV Daily Educational Programming
WOSU TV has changed its weekday schedule from 7am to 5:30pm to help students, teachers and families with at-home learning. The schedule provides age- and grade-level appropriate, standards-based programs so Ohio students can continue to learn with limited or no internet access.

Serving students in grades Pre-K–12, programming ranges from the PBS KIDS series Peg + Cat and Cyberchase focused on math skills for early elementary kids to NOVA and American Experience programming for older students. Teachers and students have access to free online resources from PBS LearningMedia™ to support the programming and WOSU Classroom’s educational team provides additional teacher resources at wosu.org/classroom/learningathome.

Watch WOSU TV on channel 34.1, Spectrum 1007, WOW! 205, Direct TV 34 and YouTube TV.

Talking to Kids About Coronavirus
If you are not sure where to start the conversation about COVID-19 with your little ones, PBS has you covered with a collection of resources for calming any fears your child may have about catching the bug, debunking what they may have heard on the playground and reassuring them everything will be okay.

Professional Resources for Teachers: Online Teaching and Learning
Having to move to an online teaching model quickly can be overwhelming. WOSU Classroom has partnered with Ohio Ed Techs to create a collection of videos for educators to support this new model. These resources are free for anyone to access at ohioedtechs.org.

Also in partnership with Ohio Ed Techs, WOSU Classroom is providing virtual office hours for educators who need assistance teaching in an online environment. Educators can ask questions about teaching resources and web tools available for online teaching and learning via live video chat. All these resources and more can be accessed at wosu.org/classroom/learningathome.

Virtual Experiences and Resources
Social distancing doesn’t mean you can’t have fun, learn something new, engage with people and have meaningful cultural experiences. WOSU Public Media launched wosu.org/virtual to curate local, national and international resources and virtual experiences that you can enjoy from the safety and comfort of your own home.

Free Daily eNewsletter for Parents and Educators
Parents and educators can sign up to get lessons and activities delivered right to their email box every morning at wosu.org/classroom/learningathome. These daily curated collections of resources are organized by grade and aligned to state standards. Most importantly – they’re fun! This is a great way to keep kids engaged and learning from home.

WOSU Community Impact Update
COVID-19 Pandemic

During this unprecedented time, WOSU Public Media continues to produce important services to serve Central Ohio. While we pivoted to primarily working remotely to keep our team safe, our response to the health crisis has been extraordinary. Outlined here are some highlights of that work organized under the six primary values our organization cherishes.

Trusted Source

• WOSU has been airing Ohio Governor DeWine’s daily news conferences live on WOSU TV, 89.7 NPR News, and online since mid-March. Dr. Amy Acton and Lt. Governor Jon Husted join the governor each day to outline the situation in Ohio. Acton, the state health director, has been an inspirational leader as Ohio citizens deal with the crisis. Online streaming has exceeded 400,000 to date with more than 271,000 listening hours. WOSU TV ratings double during the broadcasts.

• WOSU TV local news briefs after PBS NewsHour sum up the day’s coronavirus news including clips from the governor’s pressers and other coverage. It also serves to promote PBS and NPR specials and important local coverage. WOSU’s Friday night Columbus on the Record public affairs program is using Zoom technology to analyze the week’s news on WOSU TV.

• WOSU’s 89.7 NPR News was named the best news station in Ohio by AP and showed why with an exclusive story from WOSU News reporter Paige Pfleger about Columbus-based Battelle’s work to disinfect personal protection equipment - even President Trump retweeted.

• The 89.7 NPR News live blog is giving the latest information in real time about the coronavirus in Central Ohio. To date, the blog has 69,923 pageviews with an average time on page of 4:25.
Access to Knowledge

- As Ohio schools closed, WOSU TV radically changed its daytime schedule to air teacher-curated, in-home educational programming linked by our WOSU Classroom team to learning resources including PBS Learning Media. WOSU led this statewide effort and all eight public stations responded in unison. This unique service provides grade-level, standards-based programming for Ohio students to learn even with limited internet access.

Ohio State Superintendent Paolo DeMaria:

“I am humbled and grateful that all eight of Ohio’s public broadcasting stations have stepped up as major partners committed to delivering high-quality, grade-appropriate learning to students, complementing the amazing effort being made by Ohio’s schools and districts.”

Paolo DeMaria, Ohio’s Superintendent of Public Instruction Ohio Department of Education

- Along with building resources for the new TV schedule, WOSU Classroom is providing a daily e-newsletter to 7,791 teachers and parents of young children with ideas for learning and fun while at home. A variety of online resources for parents and teachers is available at wosu.org/classroom/learningathome.

To date, it has 3,766 pageviews and an average time on page of 3:03.

Intentional Innovation

- WOSU is partnering with three local nonprofits to provide Gov. DeWine’s daily press briefing in Spanish via livestream to help ensure that accurate information is reaching Central Ohio’s immigrant and refugee communities in a timely manner. The initiative uses Zoom integrated with our livestream technology. This allows the interpreters to stay safe at home while they work. The stream has attracted hundreds of viewers daily and that number is expected to grow as we publicize this service.

- On May 3, WOSU TV is broadcasting the most unique Ohio State commencement in the 150-year history of the university. The ceremony will include elements of a traditional graduation with musical performances and special guest Apple CEO Tim Cook delivering the address. WOSU TV will cover the event live from Ohio Stadium and will livestream it throughout the world.
Elevating Voices

- It is an unprecedented time in our history and WOSU is capturing what our community is thinking through the Letters from Home project. This digital project is allowing our community to tell its story about the challenges of social distancing and the stress of dealing with this disease.

- WOSU is providing a daily town hall forum on All Sides with Ann Fisher, a local two-hour radio/TV talk program. Airing live on 89.7 NPR News and on WOSU Ohio digital TV, Fisher focuses on the coronavirus with programming about the economic impact on the local arts and local agriculture, on the challenges of rural hospitals, detailing the stimulus bill, working-from-home strategies, and much more.

Celebrating Culture

- WOSU Public Media launched wosu.org/virtual/ to curate local, national and international resources and virtual experiences that you can enjoy from the safety and comfort of your own home. Watch a live local music performance, take a museum tour, visit a national park, borrow a library book, play some trivia, take a dance class, browse an art fair.

From 614Now:
“WOSU Public Media has come to the rescue by putting together a list of local, virtual experiences to enjoy from the safety and comfort of your bunker. Here’s a list of just a few upcoming events ranging from music to the arts.”

- Each day on Facebook, Quarantine Classics from Classical 101 radio connects listeners with a video of a great live musical performance.

Authenticity

- WOSU is continuing its culture of collaboration, respect and openness as its staff deals with personal and family challenges brought on by this crisis. There are regular check-ins with at-home staff, a weekly all-staff Zoom session that is often fun and whimsical, and the WOSU Insider e-newsletter that regularly goes out to staff and WOSU board members outlining station activities and challenges.
