Broad & High returns with an all new season!

The 1920 Election – One for the Ages

The political and social polarization of this country was certainly on display during the political conventions aired on WOSU TV and radio in August. But there is much more to watch on election day than the fight for the presidency. Will Republicans in 2020 hold on to the Senate majority? Will Democrats hold or strengthen their House majority?

A century ago, it was two Ohioans facing off for the top spot: Republican Senator Warren G. Harding against Democratic Governor James Cox. It was the first election that women (white only) had the constitutional right to vote. The down-ticket impact of the 1920 election was immense. As Harding won a landslide victory, Republicans greatly strengthened their majority in both the House and Senate primarily due to the unpopularity of Democrat Woodrow Wilson’s presidency.

As a media historian however, I don’t think of 1920 in terms of the face-off between two Ohioans. I see the birth of radio.

1920 was the year a station in Pittsburgh owned by Westinghouse received a special license just in time to broadcast the election results. KDKA’s election broadcasts were heard across the Midwest. Auditoriums big and small across Ohio became the site of crowds who came to experience radio and hear which Ohioan would take the presidency. For the first time, radio was demonstrated as an activity not just for tech whizzes, but for everyone to participate in.

Ohio State was leading the charge for educational radio in 1920 with experimental radio station 8XI, which began market and weather reports for Ohio farmers. Without the backing of a huge electronics concern like Westinghouse, universities relied on the faculty and students of electrical engineering departments to prop up early radio and serve the public well beyond the campus borders.

That’s what WOSU continues to do a century later as we near the 2020 election. Check out WOSU’s popular Ohio Voting Guide (wosu.org/voterguide) for more information on how to vote, and a rundown of what you can expect on your ballot. Above all, exercise your right and vote!
The 2020 Presidential Election is rapidly approaching, and the COVID-19 pandemic has many voters concerned about casting their votes safely and securely. In an effort to ease voter concerns, WOSU Public Media and 89.7 NPR News have curated a growing list of voter resources at wosu.org/voterguide, including a guide to voting by mail and early in-person voting.

Ohio Voter Guide

Look to the Ohio Voter Guide for valuable resources regarding the 2020 Presidential Election. From the most important dates to remember, to how to register to vote, to the variety of options for voting by mail or early in-person this fall. It also outlines what to bring with you to vote at the polls. Head to the “What Am I Voting On?” section for information on the various races and candidates you’ll find on Ohio’s ballot.

Key Dates for the Fall Election:

- Oct. 5, 2020: General election voter registration deadline
- Oct. 6, 2020: Early voting and mail-in voting begins
- Oct. 31, 2020: Deadline to request mail-in ballot
- Nov. 2, 2020: Early voting and mail-in voting ends
- Nov. 3, 2020: General election

2020 – An Election Like None Other

This one will be different. The 2020 election will be different from past elections in so many ways it will take historians decades to analyze. An incredibly divisive incumbent seeks reelection amid racial strife, rising urban tensions and a global pandemic that will change how we cast and count votes.

NPR and the 89.7 NPR News team will stay on top of it all to bring you trusted fact-based thoughtful coverage. While we always monitor the election process, this year it will be at the top of our story assignment list. We will watch closely how local and state officials administer the election – mail-in voting, early in-person voting and election day voting. We will watch for lost registrations and ballots, mail delays, poll worker shortages, long lines and any possible voter suppression or fraud. We will report on how changes in voting alter the way campaigns look for votes.

Of course, we will provide you all the information you need to decide how to vote. We do not expect as many candidate visits, but when President Trump or former Vice President Biden come to Ohio, we will be there to hear what they have to say, and fact check their statements. We will talk to all kinds of voters from around Central Ohio to learn what is important to them as they cast their ballots.

All Sides with Ann Fisher (Weekdays from 10am–12pm on 89.7) and Columbus on the Record (Fridays at 8:30pm on WOSU TV) are the places for engaging discussions of the 2020 campaign. And our political podcast Snollygoster provides a civil, but slightly irreverent perspective on Ohio political news.

Hold on tight, the 2020 election will be a wild ride. 89.7 NPR News and WOSU will be hanging on right there with you.
Shining a Light on Local Musical Offerings

Classical 101 is committed to shining a light on the outstanding musical offerings in Central Ohio. And it’s particularly important during a time when live concerts are limited. Our Sunday afternoons at 1pm are dedicated to sharing concerts you may have missed… or would like to hear again.

This month we start a new series of chamber music concerts. Chamber Music Columbus is an organization that has been presenting world class artists and ensembles for more than 70 years. Concerts are held in the acoustically excellent Southern Theatre.

Chamber Music Columbus In Concert, hosted by Christopher Purdy, features just a few of the highlights from recent seasons. This month, you’ll have a chance to hear the Harlem String Quartet, the Estonian Chamber Philharmonic Choir, Imani Winds, and the Academy of St. Martin in the Fields Chamber Ensemble. Complete programs and program notes will be available on the Chamber Music Columbus website (chambermusiccolumbus.org). Following the opening concert on October 4, Jennifer Hambrick will host a live post-concert Q&A with members of the Harlem Quartet. Look for information on Classical 101’s social media and the CMColumbus website about how you can join this virtual gathering.

October on The American Sound includes a symphonic masterpiece by one of America’s most gifted women composers – Amy Beach’s powerful “Gaelic” Symphony. Also, Michael Abels’ breathtaking Winged Creatures performed by brothers Anthony McGill, principal clarinetist of the New York Philharmonic, and Demarre McGill, principal flutist of the Seattle Symphony. Get into the Halloween spirit with a work inspired by John Corigliano’s award-winning score for a film about an accursed violin that haunts everyone who plays it. Red Violin: Chaconne for Violin and Orchestra is dark and stunning.

Join host Jennifer Hambrick for The American Sound, Saturdays at 6pm and Tuesdays at 7pm on Classical 101.

Classical 101 can also be heard in Columbus on HD Radio 89.7-2 and 101.1-2, as well as streaming at wosu.org and on WOSU’s mobile App.

All programs are subject to change.
