“The Hill We Climb”

The poetry of Amanda Gorman – the nation’s first youth poet laureate – was one of the high points of the presidential inauguration on January 20. “The Hill We Climb” was timely and relevant. Here is an excerpt:

“It’s because being American is more than a pride we inherit, it’s the past we step into and how we repair it.”

“How we repair it.” When WOSU tackles the history of racism or brings on local guests whose lives have been shaped by racism, we often hear from audience members who ask, “Why is it all about race?” “Aren’t we beyond this?”

Our first step must be to acknowledge our racist past, but also our racist present, because we are far from beyond this. The murder of George Floyd; the tragic, unnecessary deaths of two local Black men killed by police in December; the storming of the Capitol by many espousing white supremacy; the list goes on and on.

We are still grappling with race and it’s a reckoning that will not just go away. This is not about changing attitudes and beliefs, it’s about the structured inequality built by a history of racist policies and practices. We must dig in to do the hard work to grow an anti-racist culture, facing up to racism in our own worlds.

At WOSU, we pledge to continue to tell stories of inequity and the striving for racial justice. In the words of Amanda Gorman:

“We are striving to forge a union with purpose
To compose a country committed to all cultures, colors, characters and conditions of man
And so we lift our gazes not to what stands between us but what stands before us
We close the divide because we know, to put our future first, we must first put our differences aside
We lay down our arms
so we can reach out our arms to one another

Building Resilience Through Difficult Times & Tough Talks

WOSU Classroom is partnering with Sesame Street In Communities to provide simple strategies to help young learners navigate some of life’s traumatic experiences including parental addiction, health emergencies and exploring emotions.

In these free virtual courses, adults who have children in their care work with early childhood experts to learn playful ways to stay healthy, comfortable and engaged during challenging times.

Participants will explore utilizing the free resources on the Sesame Street In Communities Resource Hub. Attend by registering at wosu.org/sesame.

89.7 NPR News Hits Number One in Columbus

At 89.7 NPR News, we have a simple strategy: When important stuff happens, make sure it is on the radio.

It sounds simple, but it’s not that easy. You must have a team in place that is experienced and flexible enough to quickly change course, overcome technical difficulties, get reporters to the scene, keep hosts on the air. Engineers must be ready to coordinate satellite feeds. Producers must be willing to scrap a program that took them weeks to prepare.

While covering big breaking news is stressful and messy, when you do it well, and if you do it every time it happens, listeners learn to rely on you. We want our listeners to say, “Something big is happening, turn on WOSU.”

89.7 NPR News’ strategy of being Central Ohio’s primary source for radio news paid off this fall. For several years, WOSU has steadily climbed in the Columbus ratings. First, we made it into the top ten, then top five. In December, WOSU finished #1 for the first time ever. 89.7 NPR News was the top-rated station overall, during morning drive, afternoon drive, and on weekends.

The incredible election-related news certainly fueled our growth. But we have had big news before; the difference is 89.7 listeners now know with certainty that when there’s big news, WOSU and NPR will have it and provide thoughtful, balanced coverage.

We will not stay number one. In fact, during the holidays, a station that plays Christmas music 24/7 rose to the top. That’s OK – after the year we had, “Rocking Around the Christmas Tree” hit the spot. But when The Electoral College met in December and then when a mob stormed the Capitol on January 6, listeners knew where to turn: 89.7 NPR News. And they did.

A Spotlight on Local Performances: Columbus Symphony Orchestra

As local performing groups continue to explore their safe return to live performances, this month we’re excited to share two recent concerts from the Columbus Symphony Orchestra.

During the pandemic shutdown, we’ve been revisiting some of the excellent CSO broadcasts from our archives, but this is brand new content recorded in late January 2021. These concerts were recorded at the Ohio Theatre with strict safety protocols in place, including an audience capacity of just 300, socially distanced seating and mandatory face coverings.

The two Russian Winter Festival concerts feature music by Prokofiev, Shostakovich, Tchaikovsky, and ... Mozart? Yes, Mozart. Tchaikovsky was deeply inspired by Mozart’s music and this program features music by the two masters, including Tchaikovsky’s orchestral suite known as “Mozartiana.” You can hear that program on Sunday, March 7 at 1pm with conductor Rossen Milanov. Then on March 14, it’s the Shostakovich Chamber Symphony in F and Prokofiev’s blazing Piano Concerto No. 3 with soloist Caroline Hong. This concerto is a real tour de force, so you don’t want to miss it! Rossen Milanov and the CSO round out the month with music by Mozart, Beethoven, George Walker and Joseph Boulogue.

Hear the Columbus Symphony Orchestra broadcasts all month Sundays at 1pm with host Christopher Purdy.

Programming Highlights

March is Women’s History Month and The American Sound has some programs you’ll want to catch. Dana Suesse (1909-1987) was a child prodigy pianist and organist from Kansas City, Missouri who went on to gain acclaim as a composer who blended her classical training with the jazz and popular music of her day. Hear one of her most enduring works, the Concerto in Three Rhythms on The American Sound with host Jennifer Hambrick, Saturday March 6 at 6pm and Thursday March 9 at 7pm.

The Metropolitan Opera Saturday Matinee broadcasts continue in March with archived performances of Bizet’s Carmen (3/6/21), Mozart’s The Marriage of Figaro (3/13/21), Rossini’s Le Comte Ory (3/20/21) and Mozart’s Don Giovanni (3/27/21).

Broadcasts from the 2020-21 season of the Toll Brothers—Metropolitan Opera International Radio Network air Saturdays at 1pm.
