A Letter from the General Manager

News may be undergoing changes in the way it is disseminated, but public consumption of news and information continues to be strong. In Central Ohio, our audience has proved that by making WOSU’s 89.7 NPR News, with its combination of local news and NPR, one of the highest-rated stations in the market.

And our team is not done yet!

For the past few years, several Ohio stations led by WOSU Public Media, Cleveland’s Ideastream Public Media, and Cincinnati Public Radio, have been working on a plan to bolster news coverage throughout our state. The three Cs, representing the largest cities in Ohio, will be joined by WYSO/Yellow Springs as lead stations, and four additional public broadcasters, to form The Ohio Newsroom. When startup details are completed, our goal is to bring news reports from the entire state, including areas we call “news deserts,” where there is no longer an identifiable or reliable news source.

We have previously introduced The Ohio Newsroom in news releases and other correspondence. But we have not been this close to seeing what started a few years ago as an idea among stations get this close to becoming reality. The Ohio Newsroom holds such promise in delivering news not available anywhere else. It furthers our public service mission and commitment of using the power of broadcasting to serve our communities by holding newsmakers accountable and telling compelling stories. Last month, 24 station leaders representing eight public media stations came together at WOSU for the first time as a group to delve deeper into the launch of this initiative.

There was excitement in the room as stations discussed the project’s tremendous potential. The Ohio Newsroom took a major step recently with the hiring of Clare Roth, a public media veteran, as the first managing editor to lead the collaborative. We will now begin the process of staffing the vision and focusing on avenues to sustainability.

While some logistical matters remain, many of the toughest hurdles have been overcome. It is important for audiences to know that, through The Ohio Newsroom, our goal is to contribute to an informed populace, better educated to form opinions based on unbiased reporting.

Ronnie Agnew
General Manager
The Ohio State University
WOSU Public Media is working with PBS stations across the state to provide a program to help address disruptions to learning caused during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Working in partnership with the Ohio Department of Education, Ohio’s PBS stations draw upon their local, state and national resources to continue learning beyond the school day, supporting educators, caregivers, parents and students. Ohio Learns 360 is an innovative three-year initiative that helps address the long-lasting effects of the pandemic.

Ohio Learns 360 provides programs with PBS resources, including standards-based curriculum and materials, virtual field trips, interactive video programs, community events and more, all designed to accelerate student learning and support the state’s most vulnerable learners.

Targeting kindergarten through fifth-grade students from underserved communities, Ohio Learns 360 kicks off this spring and continues through September 2024. Students in out-of-school-time programs will be able to engage in hands-on STEM activities with some of their favorite characters, such as Cat in the Hat, or go on a virtual field trip to one of Ohio’s leading science museums. Students at home will also be able to participate in virtual afterschool programs that feature a well-known PBS Kids character. Parents can learn how to support their child’s learning through Family First webinars, and families will be able to attend community events offered by their local PBS station.

A recent examination of Ohio-specific data found that “pandemic-related declines in student achievement (from March 2020 to spring 2021) are roughly equivalent to students missing one half to one full year’s worth of learning in math (students in later grades had greater declines) and between one-third and one-half of a year’s worth of learning in English language arts (depending on the grade).”

More startling was their finding that Black and Hispanic students experienced declines 2–3 times more than white students, and “economically disadvantaged, homeless, and disabled students and English-language learners experienced English Language Arts test score declines that were generally 2–3 times larger than declines among students not identified as such.”

Suspects

Binge seasons 1–5 starting September 1

DS Jack Weston, DC Charlie Steele and DI Martha Bellamy investigate a series of crimes in modern-day London, from missing persons to murders and drug overdoses. The program has a unique edge and "insider" feel because the episodes are unscripted and the actors improvise the dialogue.

Apple Tree Yard

Watch starting September 8

Yvonne Carmichael’s conventional world spirals into chaos when a chance encounter leads to an impulsive affair with a charismatic stranger. Fantasy and reality soon begin to overlap and everything she values is put at risk. Based on the novel by Louise Doughty.

The Rivals of Sherlock Holmes

Watch seasons 1–2 starting September 22

Based on Sir. Hugh Greene’s anthology of early detective stories, this series brings to life the many detectives of late Victorian London who were rivals of Sherlock Holmes.

The Sinking of Laconia

Watch September 8

In 1942, a German U-boat torpedoed the RMS Laconia, sinking the British ship which carried more than 2,000 passengers. Led by an outstanding cast, this harrowing story is dramatized with deft characterizations, narrative subtlety and moral complexity.
WOSU and CMC Examine the Roots of Division, Look for Solutions

Michael Tomasky, columnist, editor of the New Republic, and author of the book If We Can Keep It says, “America has been divided since the ‘90s. The 1790s.” From its birth, the United States has been divided by politics, economics, geography and race. But the current division looms as the greatest threat to America’s political system since the Civil War.

In a series of forums entitled “Democracy in Crisis,” WOSU Public Media with our partner the Columbus Metropolitan Club are examining the causes of our division and looking for ways to bring Americans together.

WOSU’s News Content Director Mike Thompson moderates the discussions. This summer, he traced the long history of American division with Tomasky. Last month, a panel of experts examined past and present threats posed by extremist groups from the left and right sides of the political spectrum.

This month, the series examines the increasing polarization of the Supreme Court and American judicial system. In October, the series looks at whether we should increase regulations on the media to combat lies and conspiracy theories. The day after the November election, we analyze the impact of the 2022 midterms. For December, we try to predict what America will look like in the decades ahead.

WOSU and the Columbus Metropolitan Club are perfectly matched to bring you these important discussions because both organizations believe civil conversation can bring solutions. We urge you to join us in person for “Democracy in Crisis.”

Listening Through a New Lens

New Perspectives: From Bach to Biggie Returns

This month, Classical 101 is thrilled to offer 4 new episodes of New Perspectives: From Bach to Biggie, with host Stephen Spottswood.

Stephen brings us his take on music of the past and music that is happening today. Meet wonderful artists who are beginning to make the world theirs, including conductor Jonathon Heyward, who was just named music director of the Baltimore Symphony.

With Spottswood as guide, enter the worlds of Florence Price, The Rize Orchestra, Chick Corea and Frankie Beverley. Not to mention Beethoven, Rachmaninoff, Bach and Ibert. You’ll also hear some exciting new titles like Peach Lemonade, East Coast Vibe, and Fly. And while we think Stephen is one of a kind, he’ll be joined by his talented twin brother Stanley for an original violin/piano piece called If Tuxedos Could Talk.

Try listening through a new lens! Join Classical 101 for New Perspectives: from Bach to Biggie, Sunday afternoons at 1pm in September.

Programming Notes

The American Sound

On The American Sound this month, enjoy Pulitzer Prize winner Kevin Putz’s energizing River’s Rush, Amy Beach’s serene By the Still Waters, Michael Torke’s sparkling Blue Pacific and other works inspired by water.

Enjoy otherworldly orchestrations of choral works by the Medieval mystic and composer Hildegard of Bingen in contemporary composer Barbara Harbach’s Visions of Hildegard. Also, Akenya Lamb’s moving tribute to Emmett Till, Fear the Lamb.

Join host Jennifer Hambrick for The American Sound, Saturdays at 6pm and Sundays at 7pm on Classical 101.

Symphony Showcase

September’s Symphony Showcase takes a deep dive into French symphonies from the 19th and 20th centuries, featuring lush harmonies and some surprising orchestral textures. From household names like Ravel and Debussy to some composers who may be new discoveries for you, like Louise Farrenc.

Join host Kent Teeters for Symphony Showcase, Sunday nights at 6 and Thursdays at 7pm on Classical 101.
